Boggs and Asher Tell

Out

Joe S. Boggs, state highway engineer, and H. H. Asher, member of the state highway commission for three and one-half years, were speakers at the Kiwanis luncheon today. Both spoke in glowing terms of the work accomplished and urged continued cooperation in road building.

Major E. S. Helburn, member of the ad body, in introducing Mr. Boggs, stated that he was a man with vision and an official who had done much to ke road building and maintenance of potty policies.

Building of roads is a business man's job and has no place in politics," declared Mr. Boggs. "During my or five years of service I have led, to take it out of politics but in yet politics, raises its head. During the past thirty days there have been over my desk 1300 applications for jobs. I have interview many of them and ninety-nine per cent of them now no more about road construction than they do of spots on the sun.

"It has been my great pleasure to be associated with Major Helburn in his work. In him you have a man in vision, a man with dreams of a link line of roads in this state by which every town will be connected with all the others.

"I am not here to advocate the old issue or the pay-as-you-go plan, business men must pay for the roads they way and I am not telling how it will be done."

The brief but interesting and informative address of the highway engineer was enthusiastically received by the Kiwanians. Major Helburn next introduced Hugh Asher of Pineville. The speaker told of the former ill feelings between Middlesboro and his town. "This feeling is rapidly appearing and the younger generation of men, such as we have here in Kiwanis club, has done much to away with it," he declared. He highly commended the work of Senator Joe F. Bosworth for good roads in Kentucky, stating that he had been remarkable, more than any other person, for the splendid work already done and now being planned. He said he should be kept in the senate the rest of his life to continue the work.

Senator Bosworth made a brief speech in which he thanked the former state commissioner for the praise, cordially invited the two road men to write to him and thank them the good work. They were also to write to garages and firms in town and inform them of the good of the Middlesboro-Knoxville line.

Grace Martin, listed as chairman, out of town and unable to be at meeting, Dr. C. G. Brunnett and Mrs. W. K. McClure, builders as skers, did not make their addresses to the visits of the road boosters.

Places Violating Prohi Laws
Will be Closed

By Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Apr. 24.—Complying with instructions from Attorney General Stone, Federal District Attorney Ball today is preparing for an enforcement of the "padlock clause," of closing for one year public places where serious prohibition violations occurred. It is estimated that close to 135 Louisville places are affected and will cause estimated loss annually in rents. Instructions also asked jail sentences and heavy fines for future violators.

FLORIDA TRAILS IN LEGISLATION

Working Conditions are Standardized.
Miss Anderson Tells League of Woman Voters

BITTALO, April 24.—Every state in this country, except Florida has enacted at least one law covering only women and insuring to those who work out side the home some measure of standardization of the conditions under which they work. Miss Anderson director of the woman's bureau of the United States department of labor told the conference on women in industry, which is being held here in connection with the convention of the National League of Women Voters.

Miss Anderson said that about 4,000,000 women are covered by such laws, the most numerous of which are those that govern the hours of woman labor. This limitation varied from eight to 11 hours a day and 15 states prohibit the employment of women at night in certain occupations. Forty-one states have laws that women shall be furnished seats at their work and 13 states have minimum woman wage laws.

"It has not been the experience of the bureau that these laws have kept women from obtaining employment or from advancing in their chosen field," she said. "On the contrary the census of 1920 shows that the number of gainfully employed women in all occupations is increasing and that the number of women employed in the higher paid occupations shows a much larger per cent of increase over 1910 than do all classes combined.

Opening of Large Box
Is Sad Denouement

All is not gold that glitters nor is baggage always to be relied upon as security for a hotel bill. This sad fact has been deduced by the proprietor of a local hotel.

The woman, demure, petite and with all the attractions attending innocent girlhood, applied for a room. A boy of ten, her brother, was her sole traveling companion. The clerk noticed with satisfaction that considerable baggage was carried. This was in the form of a large square box wrapped with heavy paper and tied, which the boy supported in his arms.

The next morning the couple left, telling the clerk they would return in a few minutes. Seeing they had left the mysterious box for security, he did not demand payment. Hours passed and the erstwhile roomers did not return. The clerk and the proprietor went to the room and opened the box. It was empty except for a few old newspapers.

ROAD MEN ARE IN QUANDARY

1926 Assembly Will Pass Bond Legislation

By Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Apr. 24.—(Special) Virginia this year finds herself in a quandary in the matter of raising finances for her State highway system. The people, in an advisory referendum, voted last fall to reject a proposal to issue $50,000,000 in bonds, 80 per cent to be devoted to State highways and 20 per cent to county "feeder" roads, and voiced approval of the pay-as-you-go policy of the special session of the General Assembly held in March, 1923. That legislature imposed, in addition to the existing 10 per cent property tax for roads, a three cent gasoline tax, one third of which was to go to county "feeder" roads.

Since then the regular session of the General Assembly of 1924 has been held. At this session pay-as-you-go advocates were in the majority and the only changes made in the highway statutes were the acts which turned the one cent gasoline tax revenues entirely over to the boards of supervisors of the various counties and another which segregated $1,000,000 of State system funds to the purpose of closing gaps in the system. The latter act has been condemned generally, but the former is declared by good roads advocates to be but another step in tearing down the State system, which is declared to be the logical outcome of the highway policy being pursued by the present legislature.

"In other words, the last three big disasters have all been accompanied by fire and have been primarily due to fire. In addition, a number of small blimps have also burned and it is time for the facts to be thoroughly known and appreciated."

Dr. Moore said that the export of helium should be forbidden by federal legislation, as the United States possesses a practical monopoly of this gas. Helium, he asserted, has far-reaching possibilities in commercial aviation, but these would be endangered by the construction of hydrogen ships, which, he thought, would probably burn up.

"The United States possesses the only large supplies of helium bearing gas in the world," Dr. Moore continued. "The gas belt containing helium extends through Texas, up through Oklahoma, southeastern Kansas, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York, and comes back through West Virginia to Kentucky, and the rich gas is in Texas, Oklahoma and southeastern Kansas.

"With helium, it would be impossible to destroy an airship with a single incendiary bullet; it would be necessary to rip the bags to pieces before the airship could be brought to the ground. In future wars, airships will be built sufficiently large to carry a number of small fighting airplanes and these can be dropped or recovered by the airship at will.

"It is not difficult to appreciate what a fleet of such airships could do to a city like New York, London or Paris. Fifty 5,000,000 cubic feet ships, each one carrying six airplanes and 20 tons of bombs would do immense damage to any city and would be well-protected by the fighting planes that these ships would carry.

"This country has practically a monopoly of helium gas and it is strongly advisable that exploitation of this valuable asset should not be allowed.

"The cost of helium is being cut so rapidly that within a year or two it will be virtually as cheap as hydrogen."

General Bruce stated that the scientific work of the expedition would be similar to that of previous years, except that on this occasion it was hoped to intensify observations and to secure a better photographic record. "We are as keen as mustard to be off," he said, "for with all its hardships there is fun in it."

But all has been going well with the pay-as-you-go people until last month (March) they defeated the proposed bond issue at the November election by circulating reports that under their policy the state had approximately $12,000,000 a year to devote to State system construction.

Despite the fact that denial of these figures was made by George P. Coleman, president of the Virginia Good Roads Association, who was former State Highway Commissioner, was in a position to know the facts, the statement of $12,000,000 a year was accepted by the majority of the voters, many of whom just as eagerly swallowed more exaggerated statements of from $20,000,000 to $22,000,000 per year.

But in March the Virginia Highway Commission makes its allocation of road funds for the state's eight construction districts and it was right there that the pay-as-you-go bonds changed to thin air. Acting on the campaign statements that there was plenty of money in sight for highway, people from every community in the State clamored for allocations. When the allocations for the eight districts were totaled, it was found that they amounted to exactly $3,457,000. When to this was added the $1,000,000 for closing gaps and amounts for overhead, equipment and the like, the grand total only reached $6,018,860. There has been a big howl over the State, but the Highway Commission, appointed by Governor Trinkle, a pay-as-you-go advocate, says that this is all the money for 1924 allocations and that they are helpless to do more.

Dissatisfaction caused by the financial status as revealed at the adjourned hearing has caused a revival of bond issue talk. Good Roads advocates declare that with a highway department equipped to handle three times as much construction as is going on the present situation is wasteful.

Basing his statement on the general dissatisfaction as a result of the allocation hearings, John W. Chalkley, newly elected president of the Virginia Good Roads Association, addressing the convention of the organization in Richmond on April 10, said that he expected the General Assembly of 1926 to authorize a bond issue for roads.

Although insisting that highway finances under the present system are ample, Governor Trinkle asked the General Assembly of 1921 to authorize him to negotiate temporary loans for highway purposes. His request was refused.

A Thought

The desire of man is his kindness; and a poor man is better than a liar.—Prov. 19:22.

Kindness is virtue itself.—Lamartine.

ADVERTISING

MIDDLESBORO

The value of advertising needs no argument. Manufacturers and dealers, whether their commodity be pins or automobiles, depend exclusively on the various forms of advertising for their sales. If a store or factory can, within a few years, familiarize millions of people with its product and become established on a firm financial basis by sales resulting from wide and well planned advertising it stands to reason that a city can sell that which it has—its business possibilities.

A member of one of our leading industrial firms was recently asked why he decided to locate in Middlesboro. His answer was that Middlesboro had been advertised to him. A majority of manufacturing enterprises choose their locations because certain places have been advertised to their promoters.

Our leading business men have deemed it advisable at the present to advertise Middlesboro by the establishment of a chamber of commerce here. The proposition of maintaining an office and employing a highly-salaried person for the job was considered too expensive. Yet there are other means of advertising. Trade journals and publications read by business men throughout the country form a splendid medium for civic advertising. There are dozens of other ways of advertising used by the most prosperous firms.

Middlesboro is being driven to industries other than coal mining for support. This fact is becoming more and more apparent almost daily. The town is so situated by Nature that it has many advantages not enjoyed by other places, advantages eagerly welcomed by industrialists.

Our citizens are fully alive to the existing conditions and the same pioneer spirit that conquered the wilderness and brought civilization into the wild places will doubtless find a way to not only maintain our present position but to considerably advance it.

A GREEK REPUBLIC

The establishment of a republic in Greece recalls the fact that their free government was born. Republican and Democratic governments everywhere owe a vast debt to the country which first showed the world that it was possible for men to govern themselves instead of being governed by monarchs or small groups of powerful individuals. Nearly all of the free institutions now dominant in the world had their source in ancient Greece.

Yet while there is a historic fitness in it, this belated return of the Greek people to something like their old form of government is attended with difficulties. It is a fair question whether the present-day Greeks possess the spirit and power which made their original democracies work so well. It has even been questioned whether there is much of the ancient blood left in Greece—so great has been the mixture of European and Asiatic races there in the last 2,000 years. For longer than that, Greece was under foreign tyranny, and though free now for nearly a century, it has been ruled during that time by kings. A republic might have worked under Venizelos; though that great statesman, as if doubting this people, preferred a constitutional monarchy.

The world, so much the debtor of Greece save for the unpleasant episode of the late war, wishes the Greeks well in their new venture, but will wait to be shown whether that peculiarly volatile race can operate a stable republic anything like our own.

COLLEGE GIRLS

HARD-BOILED

"Colleges," say a young woman writer of Washington, "are making American girls hard-boiled."

It may be true, but it may not be bad because it is true. This is something of a hard-boiled world. The idea that you are entitled to live upon the good-nature, the weakness and the sympathies of other people has spread pretty far and gathered a host of enthusiastic believers and practitioners. Women have been particularly the prey of the gentry that have fake oil stocks to sell, insufficient investments for widows' insurance money, beautiful schemes for hastening the millennium through the consolidation of feminine sentiment and votes. The sex will do very well by having a sprinkling of members who will analyze a proposition before they will gush over it.

It will derive protection from women who take the trouble of learning how to judge character. It will not lose, but will gain, because of the development of a fair amount of working suspicion.

Circumstances and choice, between them, have brought women into contact with the world at a time when it is a good thing to have a firm jaw, a cold eye and a clear understanding of the grim facts of life. A hard-boiled habit of mind is just now a defense against a multitude of forces that will destroy the individual who is too easy-going, too ready to accept palaver as a genuine article of honesty. If the colleges are producing girls of this mental habit—they may or may not be doing so—they are turning out women who can take care of themselves and their sisters—Toledo Blade.

United States is insisting on its right with debtor nations, but may get only what is left.

California is aroused over the Japanese problem. The Chinese puzzles are more easily solved than the Japanese puzzle.

The LADY OF THE HOUSE
Hal Cochran's DAILY POEM

TRIM as a dove and the essence of love is the lady I'm thinking of now. Auburn her hair and her cheeks are quite fair; there's innocent youth on her brow.

Really, my guess is that all her dresses, that hardly come down to her knees, are the last word in dash and were made by Dame Fashion especially for her, if you please.

She's haughty, this wile, through the day and night and she talks with an air of command. With every expression we call it discretion to indicate we understand.

A blossom of youth, but to tell you the truth, this tiny note fair is a terror. At rest or at play, well, she has her own way and maybe her training's an error.

But why should we worry, there's really no hurry. Let youth have its playtime and then, if she gets to be bolder, why, shucks, where she's older. We'll train her all over again.

WHAT'S GOING ON IN THE WORLD

JAPAN—PROHIBITION—

QUIZZES—GERMANY

There'll be no Japanese-American war. Not now. That's certain. Or ever—as a direct result of America's exclusion of the Japanese. But exclusion means bad feeling—a situation that makes war easy to start.

Gentlemen's Agreement

Congress discussed Japanese exclusion several years ago. Such a law, said the Japanese, would wound their pride. If Congress wouldn't pass it, the Tokyo government promised to keep Japanese laborers from coming here. Congress acquiesced. It was the "gentlemen's agreement," so much spoken of.

Ton Strong

Lately Pacific Coasters began complaining Japanese were coming despite the agreement. Again an exclusion law was urged. The Japanese said it amounted to impugning their government's good faith—an insult. Ambassador Hanihara protested. But for that the bill might not have passed. The Senate voted for exclusion, perhaps more to rebuke Hanihara than anything else.

Sure to Pass

As a matter of parliamentary technique the law isn't passed yet, but SENATOR WHEELER, indicated in Monday on a charge of taking money in most of the congressional inquiries. For instance, Captain Seafie, late of the Justice Department, told the Daugherty committee Speaker Gillet got a trunkful of seized liquor. "That's 100 per cent gossip," said a senator.

Seafie answered, "You'll find it 100 percent true."

Big Names

Other big names continue prominent in the investigations. For instance, Captain Seafie, late of the Justice Department, told the Daugherty committee Speaker Gillet got a trunkful of seized liquor. "That's 100 per cent gossip," said a senator.

Seafie answered, "You'll find it 100 percent true."

NO. 6—THE SLEEPING BEAUTY

"If you want to know the truth," said the wicked fairy.

"Waken them," declared Nancy. "You can't; it is magic sleep," said the wicked fairy. "The only thing that can waken them now is a hand from the tail of the iron dog that stands in front of the Fairy Queen's palace."

With that she disappeared into the air, leaving a little trail of smoke behind her.

Suddenly there was a whirl of wings and there stood silver wings, the Fairy Queen's fair wings.

"We found every word," she said. "I think it came in tail. And her is a hair from the iron dog's tail!"

So the three of them tiptoed to the room where the sleeping Beauty slept and touched her with the magic hand.

Instantly the whole palace awoke and there was great rejoicing.

And the sleeping Beauty and the prince gave a feast for the visitors. I'm not sure, but I think the wicked fairy was invited this time and she got over being offended.

MUSHERS MUST BE VIGILANT

Many Precautions Taken When Arctic Blizzards Sweep Down

FROZEN LUNGS

Not Uncommon Among Trappers and Prospectors in Northern Wilds

Associated Press

ANNA, Alaska, April 21. The "musher" in the Arctic Circle where winter prevails about eight months out of the year, must never relax his vigilance or he would survive the perils peculiar to the region.

To the explorer, prospector, scientist, trapper or hunter or mail and supplies who must go north of the Yukon river basin one of the greatest winter hazards is the lack of timber for firewood. In one instance the only timber is aspen, commonly known as poplar, scrub spruce and stunted brush. When a man faces 40 degrees below zero in sleeping bag and environment, he requires a big log fire and abundant fuel to keep it going. When the Arctic blizzard sweeps down man and beast are compelled to seek shelter.

In the bitterest cold raw lungs can withstand the scorching atmosphere that appears to scorch them like a flame while the blood is turning to ice. "Frozen" lungs are not uncommon but there are certain precautions that minimize the danger.

The equipment includes three pairs of heavy woolen socks, each foot underwear and shirt or vest, but of medium weight mitten augmented by buckskin shovels and a drill part, its hood faced with Wolverine fur which does not gather frost and freeze where the breath strikes it. The muskrat or beaver cap fits flaps to pull down over the ears and under the chin. The shoes frequently are moccasin mukluks.

At no time must any portion of the flesh save the eyes be exposed to the frost, and even the eyes must be protected when facing a blizzard. Trappers usually augment this "light" equipment with a complete suit of reindeer furs.

Submission to the cold of the Arctic has a different effect than might be imagined. Instead of a shivering and a gradual freezing process of freezing the frost overcomes one suddenly and almost painlessly. There is a numbness in the more exposed portions, like the feet, legs and hands. After the jaw becomes stiff, nearly immobile. A minute's exposure of a partly cold hand to low temperature causes the fingers to be one stiff and without feeling. It is as if they had gone to sleep. The man in danger of death from freezing is overtaken by a rather pleasant lethargy.

A danger is found in becoming over heated and then trying to cool off. Even when the temperature is 50 degrees below, one's body prepares all surfaces of the clothing to close. If there are any holes in the equipment, the cold penetrates like the flame from a blowpipe, boring in rather than spreading. One may have a spot the size of a dime frozen on a finger where there is a hole in glove or mitten, and the rest of the hand then becomes numb. In stopping for rest, the uninitiated often take too long and on arising wonder why their limbs refuse to function with their wonted suppleness. After several such halts, further progress becomes a struggle and unless a fire is available immediately, the chances of freezing are great.

Frozen hands or toes are treated in the time honored way of rubbing them with snow until the circulation is restored.

Horses used to carry outfit into the interior of Alaska are protected from lung freezing by a covering like a nose bag, through which the air is filtered of its biting frost before it is breathed. Nature further guards these horses by causing the hair on them to grow until by spring they resemble fur bearing animals.

Traffic Violators Warned With Cards

Modern methods for the enforcement of traffic regulations are being instituted in Middlesboro. The latest improvement in the system is method of notifying violators of the regulations to appear at the city hall.

A quantity of white tags marked in red ink, has been received and consigned to the chief of police. When patrolmen find a car that is improperly parked and its owner absent they will fill out one of the cards notifying the offender to appear at the city hall. The license number of the car will be taken and should the driver fail to appear as notified he will be arrested and brought into police court.

The swift flies faster than any other bird.

Giant Pitcher Says "Be Original" And "Dont Shift Around"

Jack Bentley, pitcher for the New York Giants, gives some timely tips to amateurs. Those intending to follow baseball for a profession would do well to heed his advice which follows.

My opening tip to the amateur ball player is, select the position you like best and stick to it.

Don't let them shift you around. The utility player never gets as far as the regular star, no matter how great his ability.

I made the mistake of doing other things besides pitching, simply because I am fortunate enough to be a better batter than the average pitcher.

My hitting has caused me to be used in the outfield, at first base and as pinch hitter.

CHICAGO, Apr. 24—Pitcher Harry Courtney of the White Sox has been sent back to the minors. He has been sold to the Vernon club of the Pacific Coast League without my strings attached.

The case of Pitcher Courtney is a most peculiar one. Possessed of enough stuff to easily win a major league berth, he has been a "shiver" his entire career.

Courtney first came to the majors as a member of the Washington club. He looked good for a while, slumped, and was traded to Chicago.

Chicago soured of him and sent him to San Francisco where he became a member of the Coast League in pitching.

This showing caused Chicago to bring him back. However, he showed so little in spring training that he was sent back to the minors before the opening of the season.

"I'd rather play in the minors any day," this peculiar pitcher said.

Coffee is Higher—Volstead Blamed

By Associated Press

BERLIN, Apr. 24—America's prohibition is responsible for the high price of coffee in Germany, in the opinion of many contributors to local newspapers. Since the Americans cannot have alcoholic drinks they use more coffee, it is argued; hence the Panama case.

high price of coffee in Germany, Germany now uses only about 25 per cent of the amount of coffee she used to drink. Coffee which cost 1.60 marks before the war now costs 3.20 marks.

Ships plying between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of the United States ordinarily handle more than two-fifths of the total cargo shipped through the Panama canal.

VIRGINIA ROAD PROGRAM BREAK

Pay-as-You-Go Plan Will Will Leave State Without Roads

TAKE NINE YEARS

Va. Good Roads Ass'n Head States That People of Old Dominion Were Deceived

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Apr. 24.—The Virginia pay-as-you-go road construction program is breaking down according to recent word from Richmond, and all indications point to an early resumption of the fight by the Good Roads Association of that state for some provisions by bond issue to finance progressive building plan.

Kentucky pay-as-you-go advocates have generally contended that we should pursue the Virginia policy. In January Governor E. Lee Trinkle, apparently realizing that current revenues would not furnish funds sufficient to meet pressing construction demands, asked his legislature to authorize him to make temporary loans said to amount to about $5,000,000, for this purpose.

Under date of April 1, Editor D. S. Freeman, of the Richmond, Va., News-Letter, which led the fight for the bond issue there, wrote the Kentucky Good Roads Association about this situation as follows:

"The situation in Virginia has developed just as we expected. The people are being misled and being told they have a great deal of money for roads when the fact is that all the large amounts are really balances brought over from year to year. The new money for 1924 will not exceed

RAINCOAT FACTORY PROJECT ENDORSED

Merchants' Association Endorses Move to Appoint Committee to Confer with Promoters Proposition for the establishment of a raincoat factory was formally endorsed by the Middlesboro Merchants' Association at a meeting held at the city hall this morning. A committee to confer with the promoters and assist them in selling stock was appointed.

The committee composed of W. V. Tennent, F. Moonan and C. O. Brown reported that the business of raincoat manufacturing is fundamentally a sound one and should be a success if properly managed.

Col. Ike Ginsburg made a motion that the association endorse the proposition. This was seconded by W. H. Gibson and carried without an opposing vote. G. H. Talbot, chairman of the meeting, appointed a committee to confer with the promoters composed of: L. P. Brown, R. W. Baker,

John W. Chalkley, of Big Stone Gap, the newly elected president of the Virginia Good Roads Association, stated on April 18 to the Kentucky Good Roads Association:

"Our people were deceived during last year's bond issue campaign. They were given to understand that we would have a great deal more revenue for road construction than is actually the case. I know something of your Kentucky situation and hope that your people will not make the same mistake. Our minds are made up to resume the fight for a bond issue. Pay-as-you-go advocates who confidently asserted last fall that we could build our roads in seven years without a bond already admit that they cannot do it in less than nine. As a matter of fact it will take from twelve to fifteen years."

FABLES ON HEALTH

When the Moon baby let loose his first wail, Mr. Mann of Anytown looked nervously about.

But the doctor quietly assured him,

"The first cry of a child is for air," explained the physician, "and after that it's up to you to satisfy the baby's air hunger."

Immediately after birth a child is in need of air to meet the demand of expanding lungs. That first lusty cry is one of the most important it will ever make."

A copious supply of fresh air in the baby's room is extremely necessary at all times. In winter months the window can be raised, but a window board should be used, allowing the fresh air to trickle in between sashes. While good ventilation should be secured, the temperature should be about 65 during the first months and not lower than 55 during the later months of the first year.

Few people realize that an open fireplace is a good medium for air circulation.

During the summer months windows should be open from top and bottom. In the hot seasons it is particularly necessary that the baby be exposed to air currents, particularly as a means of preventing heat stroke.

Finally, fresh air helps prevent colds.

Be sure the baby gets plenty of it.

MIDDLESBORO DAILY NEWS Thursday, April 24, 1924

W. V. Tennent, F. Moonan and Col. Ginsburg. The committee will elect its chairman. Though not a member of the organization, Mr. Baker agreed to serve.

Many of the members were enthusiastic and wanted to sell the stock at the meeting. The chairman did not favor this method, stating that the committee could work out these arrangements.

The proposition was thoroughly discussed. It was stated that M. H. Zauber who will be the production manager is thoroughly experienced in the business of raincoat manufacturing, that he was formerly in charge of a successful business of this kind at Jellico. Retail merchants present stated that the sale of raincoats is growing all the time.

In endorsing the proposition, the Merchant's Association does not guarantee a success of the enterprise. As an organization it does not take any stock but indications are that its thirty active members will become investors.
